kind of negative argument strong, by force whereof all things are denied, which scripture affirmeth not, or all things, which scripture prescribeth not, condemned. Hooker.

To the blank moon her office they prescrib'd.
There's joy, when to wild will you laws prescribe,
When you bid fortune carry back her bribe. Dryden.

When parents loves are order'd by a son,
Let streams prescribe their fountains where to run. Dryden.

PRE

2. To direct medically.

The end of satire is the amendment of vices by correction; and he who writes honestly is no more an enemy to the offender, than the physician to the patient, when he prescribes harsh remedies. Dryden.

The extremest ways they first ordain,
Prescribing such intolerable pain,
As none but Cæsar could sustain. Dryden.

By a short account of the pressing obligations which lie on the magistrate, I shall not so much prescribe directions for the future, as praise what is past. Atterbury.

Should any man argue, that a physician understands his own art best; and therefore, although he should prescribe poison to all his patients, he cannot be justly punished, but is answerable only to God. Swift.

TO PRESCRIBE. v. n.

1. To influence by long custom.

A relapse of puerility we have not shaken off from school, where being seasoned with minor sentences, they prescribe upon our riper years, and never are worn out but with our memories. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. To influence arbitrarily.

The assuming an authority of dictating to others, and a forwardness to prescribe to their opinions; is a constant concomitant of this bias of our judgments. Locke.

3. [Prescribere, Fr.] To form a custom which has the force of law.

That obligation upon the lands did not prescribe or come into dispute, but by fifty consecutive years of exemption. Abb.

4. To write medical directions and forms of medicine.

Give her your wreath whom you esteem most fair. Dryden.

5. Port; air; mien; demeanour.

Virtue is best in a body that is comely, and that hath rather dignity of presence, than beauty of aspect. Bacon.

A graceful presence bespeaks acceptance, gives a force to language, and helps to convince by look and posture. Collier.

How great his presence, how erect his look,
How ev'ry grace, how all his virtuous mother Shines in his face, and charms me from his eyes. Smith.

6. Room in which a prince shows himself to his court.

By them they pass, all gazing on them round,
And to the presence mount, whole glorious view
Their frail amazed senses did confound. Fairy Queen.

An't please your grace, the two great cardinals Wait in the presence. Shakep. Henry VIII.

The lady Anne of Bretagne, passing through the presence in the court of France, and espousing Chartier, a famous poet, leaning upon his elbow fast asleep, openly kissing him, said, we must honour with our kiss, the mouth from whence so many sweet verses have proceeded. Peacham.

7. Readiness at need; quickness at expedients.

A good bodily strength is a felicity of nature, but nothing comparable to a large understanding and ready presence of mind. L'Estrange.

Errors, not to be recall'd, do find
Their best redress from presence of the mind, Courage our greatest failings does supply. Waller.

8. The person of a superior.

To her the sov'reign presence thus reply'd. Milton.

PRESENCE-CHAMBER. n. f. [presence and chamber or room.]

PRESENCE-ROOM. } The room in which a great person receives company.

If these nerves, which are the conduits to convey them from without to their audience in the brain, the mind's pre- sence-room, are so disordered, as not to perform their functions, they have no postern to be admitted by. Locke.

Kneller, with silence and surprise,
We see Britannia's monarch rise,
And aw'd by thy delusive hand,
As in the presence-chamber stand. Addison.

PRESESION. n. f. [præsesio, Lat.] Perception beforehand.

The hedgehog's preseision of winds is exact. Brown.

1. Not absent; being face to face; being at hand.

But neither of these are any impediment, because the regent thereof is of an infinite immensity more than commen-surate to the extent of the world, and such as is most intimately present with all the beings of the world. Hale.

Be not often present at feasts, not at all in dissolute company; pleasing objects steal away the heart. Taylor.

Much I have heard
Incredible to me, in this displeas'd,
That I was never present on the place
Of those encounters. Milton's Agonistes.

2. Not past; not future.

Thou future things can't represent
As present. Milton.

The moments pass, if thou art wife, retrieve
With pleasant memory of the bliss they gave;
The present hours in pleasant mirth employ,
And bribe the future with the hopes of joy. Prior.

The present age hath not been less inquisitive than the former ages were. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

3. Ready at hand; quick in emergencies.

If a man write little, he had need have a great memory;
if he confer little, he had need have a present wit; and if he read little, he had need have much cunning. Bacon.
